
Press Release – 12 October 2005

Kenma is proud to introduce the Scorpio SR-i500S—the first two-way FM security system designed specifically for the motorcycle industry. This all-new alarm system is the pinnacle of design technology from Aritronix—a company that has been at the forefront of motorcycle alarm technology in the US since 1989. Aritronix have an enviable reputation for quality and innovation and have pioneered several technological advancements in motorcycle alarm security.

The Scorpio uses high frequency RF technology for communications up to 800m away from the motorcycle and works well even in difficult areas like underground car parks. The super compact transceiver allows full control of the alarm system remotely and incorporates an interactive LCD that instantly confirms all commands and alarm triggers with easy to understand icons and text. This latest technology alarm system will put your mind at ease when you have to leave your bike alone.

The alarm module measures just 90x60x20mm and is easily located on most bikes. This unit has been designed to take the punishment of motorcycle use and is built to withstand extremes of vibration, heat and pressure as well as deafen would-be thieves/wake up the neighbours with a 125dB multi tone siren.

The SR-i500S detects shock, motion and inclination as well as interference with the bike's electrical system. It even has a perimeter sensor that warns people away if they get too close to your bike, without even touching it!

For further security there is a ignition disable/anti hi-jack upgrade that allows you to remotely disable the ignition even if the keys are in the bike and the alarm is off. For more information visit <http://www.scorpionalarms.com/>.
